three Italians. Before Mrs. Jackson had left the station Alexander Mackey, a confectioner, of 579 Hudson street, called and made the same complaint.

Detectives Quinian and Brennan were detailed to make an investigation. They got a description of the trio, and having previously learned something of their methods of operation, started after methods of operation, started after them.

At the corner of Hudson and Bank streets they spotted the three suspects, who were just about to enter a drug store, and placed them under arrest.

On searching their clothing twenty-one of the spurious pieces were found on Chieto and three each on the two women. In Chieto's pockets was also found a number of letters addressed to him at 243 and 233 Elizabeth street and 213 Mott street. Some of them were mailed from Buffalo. What the contents of the letters were the detectives refused to state, but they intimated that they implicated parties in that city.

but they intimated that they implicated parties in that city.

The houses at the addresses given will be searched to-day for the piant used in the manufacture of the money. The detectives suspect that the prisoners are members of an organized gang which has been circulating the money in considerable quantities throughout the downtown districts the last two months.

To an "Evening World" reporter Mrs. Jackson said:

Jackson said:
"The two women came late my store last evening, and after looking around a while, bought a lemon for two cents. I save them the change, 33 cents, threw the quarter they gave me into the till and paid no more attention to the matter.

"A few moments later, in making change for another customer, I discovered that the quarter was a counterfeit. I ran out after them and found them about three blocks away. The man was with them "At the station their pockets were searched and enough small articles were found in them to start a general merchandise store. There were lemons, apples, boxes of matches, halrpins, and a whole lot of other things."

Attorney F. J. King, who represented the defendants, states that the women informed him they found the money wrapped up in a handkerchief and gave it to the man.

court-room of the supreme court, spe-cial Term.

"The facts in the case are simply that the congregation of St. Stanislaus Church has been struggling along for several years building up a church and now the Allgemeine Verein Society has brought an action to eject the congrega-tion. A mob of striking miners appeared this afternoon at our Jumbo mines. Nos. 1 and 2, and terrorfsed our employees. The mob threatened to come back to-morrow and burn the works down if the men now working do not stop. We must have protection from you for our employees and for our property. Please send a sufficiently large force of deputies here at once. Sheriff Cherry at once despatched enough officers to protect the works, and also sent deputies to Finleyville and Patton.
